

Chip Overstreet

VP of Business Development, Affirm, Inc.

Chip has 25 years of experience in the high tech B2B software sector as a marketing and business development executive.

Chip currently is VP of Business Development at Affirm, Inc., the SF-based fintech company started by PayPal co-founder Max Levchin to disrupt the consumer banking & credit sector. Prior to Affirm, Chip ran marketing and business development for MyBuys, the market leader in ecommerce personalization, which was acquired by Magnetic in 2015. Chip began his career at Oracle, sold his first company, RTIME, to Sony to become the multiplayer gaming engine for PlayStation, and ran worldwide marketing for Blue Martini Software (NASDAQ:BLUE) in the early 2000s.

Chip has a bachelor's degree in Economics from Stanford University.